

Elena Villalba

E. Villalba received the Dipl-Ing (MSc) degree in Telecommunications engineering from Technical University of Madrid, Spain in 2004. In 2006, she received the MPhil in Biomedical Engineering from Technical University of Madrid, Spain. In 2004, she joined Life Supporting Technologies at Technical University of Madrid, where she is currently pursuing the PhD degree. She has participated and coordinated different activities in R&D projects at the European level within the Framework Programmes. She has participated in numerous international congresses.

Her research interest includes the user interaction in wearable systems as well as the software architecture design for distributed monitoring mobile systems.